Dear Madam:-

I have your favor of the 28th and note that your library contains copies of our report for 1889, and 1905 to 1909 inclusive. This is a complete set of our reports, so far as published separately, with the exception of the 1910 report which I am mailing.

Previous to 1905, with the one exception, our reports were included in the report of the State Board of Agriculture. Annual copies of which you undoubtedly have.

Thanking you for your interest, I am

Very truly yours,

STATE HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION

PENNSYLVANIA,

A LIST OF

Apples, Pears, Peaches, Plums and Cherries.

Voted and recommended by counties for cultivation throughout the State. Arranged and tabulated by the Secretary.

HARRISBURG:
MEYERS PRINTING AND PUBLISHING HOUSE.
1889.

FRUIT LIST FOR PENNSYLVANIA, ARRANGED BY COUNTIES.

The following list of fruits is arranged and compiled in obedience to a resolution adopted at our annual meeting held at Bethlehem, Pa., January 19 and 20, 1887.

The original resolution contemplated only a list of apples, but at the following annual meeting, held January, 1888, at Lebanon, the secretary was directed to continue the list from year to year, until he has secured a complete catalogue of varieties proving most desirable in every county in the State. The list is but a beginning, and will be revised and corrected from time to time, as later and more complete reports are obtainable. It might be well to add that in making the following selections, the widest latitude has been allowed in the list of varieties, and a number of correspondents have added some kinds that are unknown to the nurserymen, and have only a local name and reputation. For want of space a few varieties receiving only one or two votes each have been omitted. If, instead of reporting by counties, the State could have been divided into five or six divisions of ten or twelve counties each, the lists could have been much abbreviated, though the result would not likely have been as satisfactory.

The following explanation will aid in a better understanding of the fruit lists. In the first or left hand column the number of varieties are given. The next column contains the names of varieties designated, given as nearly as possible in the order of preference. In the succeeding double columns, are given the figures showing the preferences of the counties as far as reported. In the report on apples, the first column gives the varieties preferred for market, the second, those preferred for family use. For instance, in the first county on the list (Adams), the figures as given, indicate that of summer varieties, "Benoni" is first choice, both for "market" and for family use. Early Harvest, second, Sweet Bough, third, Primate, fourth, etc. Under the same county, in "autumn varieties," the stars () given instead of figures, indicate that varieties were named, but no preference was given. Throughout the entire lists, it is understood where varieties are starred (), it is to indicate that they were named, but that no first, second, or any other choice was made. Under Chester county, it will be observed that while "Red Astrachan" is first choice of summer varieties for "market," it stands fifth for family use, while "Benoni," though first choice for "family," stands third, as a market apple. The distinction between varieties for "market" and "family" is confined to the list of apples only.

It will also be observed that every county in the State was reported on the list of apples, though a few of them send very meagre returns.

On pears, peaches, plums and cherries, many counties have failed to report or recommend any varieties whatever, indicating that in many sections the apple is the only fruit that is generally cultivated.

Notwithstanding these omissions, we consider the list very full and satisfactory for a preliminary one, though we hope to add to and improve it from year to year. To the many correspondents and friends who have sent lists of fruit for their respective localities, I desire to extend thanks in behalf of our Society. By their assistance only have we been able to make the fruit list what it is. We hope to awaken an increased interest in horticulture throughout the State, and will be glad to have the aid and coöperation of any who feel interested in our work.

E. B. ENGLE,
Secretary.
